CHICHESTER, N. H., March 3d, 1885.

Report of the Superintending School Committee.

DISTRICT NO. 1.

Both terms, under the same teacher, were successful, at least in this, that all of the citizens of the district, as far as I know, are satisfied with the year's work. At each of my visits I found the school in good order and classes and teacher working in harmony, and saw nothing on the part of either worthy of public criticism. At the last examination found that sufficient progress had been made to justify a favorable opinion of both school and teacher.

DISTRICT NO. 2.

This school, both terms under the care of one teacher, has done fairly well. The teacher was evidently faithful and in earnest in her work, and it is certainly through no fault of her's that greater results were not obtained. In one or two instances scholars failed to render ready obedience to the rules of the school; this was a hindrance both to them and to others. It was evident that many of the pupils might have done better, as the teacher was certainly capable and efficient. In addition to the two terms of public school, a term of ten weeks of private school was taught by Mr. Elmer E. Sanborn. Was present, by invitation, at its close. Many of the branches taught were of a higher order than those found in our regular common school course, but were handled easily by the teacher, and seemed to be well comprehended by the pupils. In mathematics, especially, there was much to approve. This was, I believe, Mr. Sanborn's first effort in teaching. In my judgment his success was above the average.

DISTRICT NO. 4.

The summer term was taught by a young lady who had never taught before. There appeared to be no lack of patience or determination on her part, still it seemed to me that if she had asserted her authority with more vigor, none of the scholars would have taken such liberties as were noted on the closing day.

The winter term, under Mr. J. V. Lane, was open to no such criticism. Good order was apparent, and his well directed efforts to get pupils to think for themselves resulted in a good showing at the examination. I think the visitors present will agree with me in saying that the term was an uncommonly profitable one.

DISTRICT No. 5.

Miss Langley, a novice in teaching, was secured for the first term. Starting right, and being well seconded by the people of the district, she led her school along easily and well. At the close the various classes acquitted themselves handsomely. The school appeared to be not only well taught, but also well governed.

DISTRICT No. 6.

The teacher of the first term needs no recommendation as an instructor. Long experience, with a natural aptitude for the work, have given him unusual success in the school-room. Several cases combined to render this a difficult school for any teacher to handle satisfactorily; but, under existing circumstances, Mr. B. advanced his classes as far, and drilled them as thoroughly, as any one had a right to expect. The exercises of the closing day were very creditable to the workers, and the thorough, systematic drill accomplished much for others, who failed to put forth their best efforts.

The fact of my being the teacher of the winter term, debars me from saying a good word for the teacher, so I will gladly and heartily give all deserved commendation to my pupils. The school being large, and the number of classes greater than it should be, each scholar could not have that personal and critical drill that is possible in the smaller schools. Again: the term was badly broken in upon by absences, no less than 1,009 half-days being lost by those who were members of the school up to the last week (not counting time lost by those who were withdrawn from the school). Of these absences, about one fourth were caused by the presence of scarletina; the remaining 756 half-days being mostly unaccounted for. A good number of the scholars took hold and worked in earnest, and to these great credit is due; but there were some whose ambition could not be aroused, and whose efforts were directed almost solely to dodging their tasks and duties. With these drawbacks and others which there is not space to mention, uniform and great progress was totally out of the question.

DISTRICT No. 8.

Both terms were kept by the same teacher, who showed himself to be a thorough instructor and, considering the disadvantages under which he labored, a good disciplinarian.

The remarks about absences in No. 6 apply with equal force here, as the absences in half-days amount to 944, of which more than half were occasional absences and probably not many of them due to serious sickness. Neither of these two districts can have a really good school till all the parents insist that only absolute necessity shall keep their children from school.

CHICHESTER AND LOUDON UNION, No. 1.

The summer term was visited twice by your committee; and, as far as could be judged by appearances, the school was fairly successful. Few absences were reported, and at the close the various recitations were quite accurately given.

The teacher of the winter term is every way qualified to succeed as an instructor; hence nothing else was expected. Although I was present only once (having failed to get notice of its close) have no doubt that general satisfaction was given. The register also shows few absences, and other facts equally creditable.

CHICHESTER AND LOUDON UNION, No. 2.

Miss Merrill, who taught here last year, was again secured as teacher. Knowing just what was needed, no time was lost in getting to work. At the beginning could see that teacher and scholars were getting along well together, and that no effort was spared to interest and encourage the learners. At the close could see that a good average advancement had been made.

The winter term, under the same teacher, was quite large, consequently much harder for the teacher to manage. Being a sprightly worker, she inspired most of her pupils with the desire to make the most of their opportunities; but, as usual, some required constant urging to make them do anything worthy of the name. Without intending any disparagement of this teacher, would suggest that the winter schools hereafter should be placed in charge of some man, who can keep order both in and out of doors, and thereby prevent any further progress in a wrong direction.

GENERAL REMARKS.

In making reports of each school, it must be understood that we do not expect to find all our teachers equally strong on the same points, nor do we mean to convey the impression that any teacher combines all the good qualities in him or herself. To decide then who are in all respects the best instructors of youth would require a more accurate knowledge of both teacher and school than can be obtained by the ordinary two visits per term. So that I have contented myself with giving the results of my own observation, with very little regard to the individual opinions of those with whom I may have conversed. It should also be remembered that in any given school all days are not alike, and of two, which are really little different in quality, one by chance may appear to advantage, while the other, by the opposite chance, might give the visitor a different impression. In the matter of commendation, my preference is to withhold praise in some cases where it is in some degree deserved, rather than to fall into the other, and perhaps I may say prevailing, error of praising overmuch. Teachers should be judged, not so much by great acquirements, as by their patience, ingenuity, and tact in imparting to others those rudimentary ideas and facts, without which future progress is difficult, if not impossible.

TEXT-BOOKS.

By an act passed at the last session of the legislature, towns are authorized to appropriate money for the purchase of text-books for the use of their schools. That this law is both just and necessary is easily shown. If teachers are properly paid from the public money, then also books should be furnished to every scholar free. Both are educators, and an adequate supply of text-books is a necessity, if we desire the full benefits of our schools for our children. Many of our scholars, in all these past years, have not properly been supplied with books. It is now within our power to settle this matter, and I hope that at our next March meeting our citizens will have so informed themselves of the merits of this proposition that they will be ready and eager to take the necessary action. The present law would remedy the evil if strictly enforced, but could scarcely fail to cause hardship, as well as hard feelings. That all may know just how the law now stands, a quotation from the General Laws, chapter 89, section 14, is here given: "The parents, masters, or guardians of the scholars attending school shall supply such scholars with the books required to be used in the schools; and upon neglect or refusal, after notice, the same shall be furnished by the school committee at the expense of the town; and the cost of the same shall be added to the next annual tax of such parent, master or guardian, if able to pay the same." Would it not be better for the town to own the books, so that under suitable restrictions and regulations, every scholar shall have placed in his hand the very book which he needs, and is capable of mastering, at the very beginning of each term,—no time lost, and mistakes, if made, can be instantly corrected.

BOOKS OF REFERENCE.

The accumulated fund of the last two years, amounting to $42.98, being the five per cent. of literary fund for the given time, has been expended as follows, after consultation with the selectmen:

Eight cyclopædias (one for each school), thirty dictionaries (to be divided among the schools), and eight "Lessons on Manners," (one for each school) have been bought, and are now on hand, and will be placed in the hands of the several prudential committees as soon as they can be properly marked. Have long felt that our scholars needed more study and drill on the spelling and meaning of words; it is hoped that these dictionaries will afford them the opportunity, and give those a chance who have not been able to secure one of their own.

The number of children in town between the ages of five and fifteen is reported by the selectmen as follows: boys, 76; girls, 63; total, 139.

CONCLUSION.

To our parents let me say: Don't consider the school as merely a place where your children will be out of your way. Don't think that the school will run itself without your active influence and aid. Don't pronounce sudden condemnation on the teacher when your child comes home vexed or dissatisfied. If the matter demands your attention at all, give it enough so that you may hear both sides patiently, calmly, and impartially; and from our own failures to govern well a small number in the family, let us learn, and be quick to appreciate, the vastly greater perplexities of the teacher; and when they need encouragement and support, let us be sure we do not measure out to them injustice and abuse, remembering that mistakes in judgment are sure to occur, but that they can better be corrected by kind inquiries and suggestions than by angry words and denunciations.

For further particulars relating to the schools see statistical table.

In regard to the amount of money, which we have been appropriating for schools, it is my positive conviction that it is insufficient, and that the least we should do would be to set aside for schools at least five hundred dollars, in addition to the amount required by law. It cannot be considered extravagance to raise this amount, and in fact it will hardly be above the average of the other farming towns in Merrimack county. Our vacations are now and have been much longer than our terms. This is all wrong; we should have three terms of from eight to ten weeks each, in each district. Then, with the aid of parents in giving all our children positive orders to obey the teacher in all things, "both great and small things," we may look for success such as is impossible under past conditions.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

SAMUEL A. KENDALL,

School Committee.
