CHICHESTER, N. H., March 1, 1893.

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Time in its ceaseless flight has brought us to the close of another school year. In giving our annual report to the public, we are happy to say that our schools, on the whole, have been very successful. We were fortunate in securing some most excellent teachers. Four were retained that we employed last year; and as far as we know, have given general satisfaction.

Just as far as the teachers could arouse the interest of the scholars and enlist the sympathy of the parents, just so far have all our schools been crowned with success. It is the united labors of teachers and scholars combined with the influence of the parents that make the best schools. If the parents or guardians are not sufficiently interested in the education of their children to see that they are constantly and punctually in school, and sent there to obey the teacher and profit by her instruction, they ought not to complain if they do not make much progress. Children that are out of school two or three days in a week cannot keep up with their classes, and lose their interest in the lessons and school. Unless a child is sick or it is absolutely necessary, they should not miss one lesson. The long list of names on the roll of honor shows an increasing interest in punctuality. Habits formed in school will abide through life.

We are glad to report also a good degree of improvement in the general work of most of our schools. The closing examinations without exception were highly gratifying. We have some very fine scholars in our schools. In one school we found a little girl four years old reading finely in the Second Reader. In another we listened to a recitation from a young miss that would have done credit to a pupil trained by an elocutionist. In another school we saw fine essays, written by three girls, on the effects of alcohol and narcotics on the human system. In another school we saw several maps that were nicely drawn and colored by a little girl. In the Centre school were some fine illustrations of reading lessons drawn from imagination, that were excellent. They not only showed native talent for drawing, but a thorough knowledge of the reading lessons. Some of our teachers have made the reading very interesting by explaining the subjects, asking questions, and requiring the pupil to look up the meaning of all hard words, and to give in their own language the substance of the lesson. There has been a decided improvement in reading in the most of our schools. Our best readers are those who understand what they read. One page well understood is worth more than ten read without a thought of what they have been reading.

Discipline is one of the essential elements of a good school. In a general way of speaking, our schools the past year have been under very good discipline. We have quite a number of scholars that have passed beyond the school age, limited at sixteen; but in most of the schools the most pleasant relations have existed between teacher and pupil. In one or two cases there has not been the interest in study there should have been nor that respect to the kind admonitions of the teacher. To try to govern some scholars with love and kindness is like "casting pearls before swine" for they do not appreciate the patience and forbearance of some kind teachers. They need the old time pedagogues with the "rawhide or birch" to teach them submission.

During the winter term we were obliged to supply two teachers for the last four weeks. Mrs. Harmon left at the Centre on account of the sickness and death of a daughter. Stella Carpenter at the Pine Ground on account of being sick. Rev. George Locke finished the Centre school. He labored hard to carry on the work Mrs. Harmon left. Edna Brown finished the other school. This was her first attempt at teaching, and we can say no experienced teacher could have accomplished more. We were very much pleased with the thorough manner in which she taught. She is one of our common school scholars, and will make a first-class teacher.

One of the existing evils we have to contend with is, that some parents, just on the reports of their children, will take them out of school. Nine times out of ten, if they would take the trouble to investigate the stories they would find the teacher blameless. We do not say teachers never make mistakes, for none are infallible; but children do not always understand that discipline is for their good or that it is for their benefit to have perfect lessons, and often get prejudiced against the best of teachers who compel them to learn thoroughly what they undertake. Parents should not speak disparagingly of a teacher before their children lest it should lessen their respect for her. It is not only an injury to the scholar to be kept from school, but an injury to the school and is discouraging to a faithful teacher. Another evil is, that some scholars have not been thoroughly taught the fundamental principles of arithmetic; and in trying to keep up with a class that has been well drilled they tax a teacher to the uttermost to do their work or constantly assist them; and if she cannot find time to give them all needed help, they report the teacher as incapable of teaching them. This is wrong and unkind, and should not be allowed; but it calls out a fact that too thorough drilling in primary work is impossible. If a good foundation is laid it is easy to build the superstructure. One other evil we have to encounter is from persons outside of the schools who have no personal interest there, who seem to take pleasure in injuring the reputation of the school and teacher by false reports. It is not in the power of the school board to remedy this evil; but we would say with all kindness to such individuals, learn and practice the Golden Rule.

In conclusion we will add that everything that tends to lower the standard of moral purity should be banished from the school-room. Profanity and obscenity should never be allowed in or about the schools.

Text-books adapted to the times are put in the hands of every scholar. Physiologies that treat of the injurious effects of alcohol and narcotics on the human system are brought down to the capacity of the smallest child in school. "The American Citizen," a book containing a fund of moral literature for advanced classes. It is reasonable to expect good results from such valuable books.

Citizens of Chichester, do you fully realize that the boys in our schools will, in just a few years, be our lawyers, doctors, and ministers; in fact, our rulers? In this progressive age all should take especial interest in schools and give them their support and sympathy.

In the nursery and common schools the principles are formed which the child and the man will carry through life. We fully realize that we cannot be too careful in providing teachers of moral worth. We always try to employ good, thorough, and efficient teachers; and if we make a mistake in our choice of teachers in any school, if anyone after visiting that school ascertain that we have placed one there unqualified for her work, we will kindly thank them to inform us at once, for we want good schools and good teachers, and labor for it and for the advancement of every school and every child that attends school in this town.
