SCHOOL REPORT.

The close of the year calls for the annual report of the school board. Necessarily, these reports, from year to year, differ but little one from the other. It is now generally conceded, by all intelligent people, that the public school system is one of the most important subjects that are considered in state legislatures and in congress.

Money is appropriated that our boys may become useful citizens.

In the quiet country town of Chichester this training for citizenship has been going on quietly and faithfully in the various districts throughout the town. Good work has been done by pupils and teachers; parents have expressed their pleasure and gratification at the progress made by their children.

The teachers were well prepared for their work, and each showed special adaption for the particular school committed to his or her care.

In District No. 1, the first two terms were taught by Miss Georgia Batchelder, who won the regard and esteem of pupils and parents. Much to the regret of the entire district Miss Batchelder declined to teach the winter term, and the place was taken by Miss Hannah Stanyan. Miss Stanyan, while well qualified to teach, hardly kept the school up to its former standing in discipline and scholarship.

In District No. 2 Miss Florence Stevens taught the entire year, doing excellent work. Especially to be commended was her rapid work in arithmetic with small scholars. Miss Stevens has a pleasing manner and many qualifications for success.

Miss Gyrtta Bartlett taught the spring term in No. 5. Miss Bartlett has a peculiarly winning way and not only did her scholars respect her but enthusiastically loved her. Her gentle voice and pleasing methods would make friends for her in any school.

The fall term was taught by F. Lenore Towle, who has taught several terms in this and other towns. Her methods were modern and she taught a good school. Miss Towle commenced the winter term, but on account of ill health was obliged to resign. Miss Bartlett was asked to finish the year, which she did in her usual successful manner.

Miss Mary Kimball, who taught the spring term in No. 6, was a lady of good education and kindly manners. She won for herself warm friends in the district but was somewhat lax in her disciplinary measures.

Miss Annie Tasker who taught the fall and winter terms was just the person to straighten out a school that had made for itself a disorderly name. While some of her methods may have been questionable, she did a good work and greatly improved the standard of the school.

Miss Griffin, who taught the spring and fall terms in No. 8, was a woman of experience and fine character, having had besides her teaching experience the honor of being a member of the school board in her own town. She vastly improved the mental and moral condition of the school; but as it required much more muscular than intellectual effort, Miss Griffin being a literary lady and tiring of such severe reformatory measures, declined to teach the winter term. Her position was taken by Mr. John Brown, who for a certain element in the school was the right man in the right place. There are some specimens of the rising generation who have utterly no respect for moral suasion and only yield obedience to the muscle of a man's arm and the quiver of a birch stick.

It goes without saying that more money would make better schools. The money appropriated has been thoughtfully expended, and yet there is a crying need for other improvements. Right here it might be well to caution the boys and girls to take better care of the books loaned them by the town. They are not a gift as some suppose, but are paid for by the taxes contributed from the hard earned wages of these same pupils' parents.

The school houses and out buildings should be often and carefully inspected by teachers and school officials, and neatness taught in all things.

Ventilation is a vexed question in most public buildings. Too many of our country school houses are built with little or no consideration of this important subject. Many a child goes from school with a raging headache or faintness, and it is thought he has studied too hard when, in fact, he has merely poisoned his lungs with impure air. Some attempt at improvement along this line has been made by putting transoms over the doors. New chairs have been supplied for all the schools, a modern desk for the teacher in No. 2, and the Horse Corner school house has been repainted. Some other miscellaneous repairs have been made.
