PRESENT THIS TO YOUR SERVER

Hard times can come upon us overnight, or they may hang around like barnacles. One thing is for sure, very few people choose to be hungry.

If you are one of those for whom hunger is a constant companion, consider applying to the Twin Rivers Interfaith Food Pantry for a little help.

Come during hours when the pantry is open and ask to speak with the Intake Manager. Together you will determine whether you fall within federal income guidelines. Bring proof of residency (like an electric bill). After qualifying, you may visit the pantry once during each month.

Next summer, when you plan your garden, please consider planting an extra row for the food pantry.

There is joy in providing fresh produce for your neighbors in need. What a great feeling when you drop off your bounty at the pantry.

It takes thousands of dollars to purchase the food and hygiene items necessary for the food pantry to help people in our communities.

Much of this money is donated by individuals, families, businesses and nonprofit organizations who go out of their way to keep the pantry afloat.

Members of the communities generously give from their own larders during organized food drives, and many simply drop off food when they are able.

Local businesses regularly donate their day-old and slow-sale items to the pantry.

It takes hundreds of volunteer hours each week to procure, transport and stock items in the food pantry.

Many who help with this work arrive early to transport produce from local supermarkets, or to drive to Manchester to pick up the New Hampshire Food Bank order.

At other times volunteers are needed to sort produce and stock pantry shelves.

Still others volunteer to do "intake" of new clients, or to supervise distribution of food.

The volunteer Board of Directors steers the pantry and oversees finances.

"What does this mean for me?"

It means there is a way for you to help !

You might VOLUNTEER YOUR TIME.
