SATURDAY, APRIL 4th 9:30 am

Yes, there's still a lot of snow and temperatures have been below average, but spring is here and the signs are everywhere. Each day is longer than the one before, the snow is receding, leaf buds are swelling, foxes are pairing up, male cardinals are engaging in "singing wars", chipmunks have emerged from their dens and crows are building nests. Celebrate the new season with a walk in the woods. We'll take a last look at the forest in its winter aspect and look for signs of the new season. We'll meet behind the backstop of the baseball field adjacent to Mast Way School. All ages welcome! Monthly family Nature Walks are sponsored by the Lee Conservation Commission and the Senior Advisory Committee.

OLIVER CROMWELL GILBERT

This is the true story of an escaped slave, who came from Maryland and while on his journey through the Underground Railroad, spent some time in Lee. Oliver Gilbert had an interesting life and was proud of his accomplishments. His great-great-grand daughter says that “he would be dancing now” with the publication of his story. Jody Fernald, a researcher at the UNH Library, with the assistance of Oliver’s great-great-granddaughter, Stephanie Gilbert, has written the known details of Oliver’s life. Oliver Gilbert’s story has made it possible for the Cartland House in Lee to be the only documented “station” on the Underground Railroad in New Hampshire.

This book is published by the Lee Heritage Commission and is on sale now at Town Hall and Library for $10.

“The Round House” by Louise Erdrich

Likely to be dubbed the Native American To Kill a Mockingbird, Louise Erdrich’s moving, complex...novel tells of a boy’s coming of age in the wake of a brutal, racist attack on his mother. Drawn from real-life statistics about racially inspired attacks on our country’s reservations, this tale is forceful but never preachy, thanks in large part to Erdrich’s understated but glorious prose and her apparent belief in the redemptive power of storytelling. ~Sara Nelson, Amazon.com
