Dog Waste is a Problem for Everyone!

At recent public meetings, the Lee Conservation Commission and Select Board have discussed the increasing problem of dog waste being left in Little River Park, the Town Forest, other conservation areas, and even Town streets. Dog waste is more than just an unpleasant problem if you step in it. Pet waste left anywhere is a potential public health risk. Rain washes dog waste and the associated disease-causing organisms, such as giardia and salmonella, E. coli, and parvovirus, as well as types of worms like hookworms, tapeworms, and even heart worms into rivers, lakes, and bays. New Hampshire scientists have found that dogs are a significant contributor of bacteria in several New Hampshire surface waters.

As the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) Clean Water Campaign puts it, "If you think picking up dog poop is unpleasant, try swimming in it."

Most dog owners pick up after their dogs, but not everyone does. The first step is to always carry a plastic bag with you when you walk your dog. Unfortunately though, the Conservation Commission reports that bagged waste is being left on trails and in vernal pools. Please, please, always dispose of bagged waste in a trash can. Composting is not effective at killing the fecal coliform bacteria in pet waste, so you shouldn't leave pet waste in your yard at home, either.

With the help of the Conservation Commission, signs will be placed at trail heads and Little River Park to remind everyone to clean up after their dogs. In addition, a Pet Waste Station will soon be installed at Little River Park to make it even easier for dog owners to keep the Park free from poop.

Tell friends and neighbors about the effect of animal waste on the environment and our health. Encourage them to clean up after their pets and to dispose of the pet waste properly.

THE NEWMARKET ADVERTISER.

F. H. PINKHAM,
Editor and Publisher.

SATURDAY, JUNE 18, 1892.

LEE.

The pastures are looking finely, better than the fields, which give but small promise of a good harvest.

Mrs. Joseph Knight, who fell down cellar a couple of weeks ago and received serious bruises, is gaining slowly.

Quite a number of our young men have received invitations to the Agricultural barn celebration on the evening of the 17th.

Wm. Kirkwood has gone to Nashua, as foreman in Griggs' lumber yard, a position he is well qualified to fill. Our loss is Griggs' gain.

A strawberry festival was held in the town hall Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Congregational church. It was a pleasant affair.

The small show artists are just finding our little town. Last Thursday week, a nice old gent, all by his lone self, presented an entertainment at the So. Lee school house, and those who did not attend the circus found satisfaction in viewing the magic lantern pictures and other paintings in the aforesaid temple of learning.

John Morrison, track foreman here for two years, has, with his wife (nee Katie Broderick), removed to Nashua, where he will occupy a lucrative position in the B. & M. Company's yard. His faithful services here and his genial disposition have won for him many friends, who wish him good luck in his new position.

Last Tuesday evening a "polyrama" was exhibited in the Union meeting house. We judge from the circulars that it must have been instructive and pleasing. The school children were very helpful in distributing circulars and selling tickets, and only the heavy showers and threatening weather prevented a large attendance.

The Lyceum league club met last Saturday evening to elect officers for the ensuing six months and make arrangements for a celebration, arranged by the National League club, to be given by all the clubs of America the 17th of June. But owing to the Durham Agricultural celebration coming off the same day and evening, this one is postponed to July 9th, when a good time may be expected.

The terrific thunder shower Tuesday evening was short but effective, destroying or injuring trees and demolishing buildings. Jefferson Sawyer's old barn, which has stood in his meadow, has borne the buffets of many a storm, but this one laid it low. A part of a large tree on Creek bridge was shattered, and falling on the guard rail sent it into the water. At the depot in a few minutes after the hailstones began to fall, one could shovel them up by the pailful.
