Answer to Last Week's Lee Trivia Question: What's the story of how Lee received its name and became an independent town?

Lee was originally a part of the English colonial settlement of Dover, NH (1623). It is thought that the first colonists came to live in what is now called "Lee" (then still part of Dover) about 1666. When Durham (Oyster River) split off from Dover to become an independent township in 1732, the part of the Dover settlement now known as Lee was included in the new town of Durham. In 1766, Lee was incorporated as an independent town in the colony of New Hampshire. In 1916, John Scales - in his "Old Home Week" address about the history of Lee - explained the naming of Lee in this way:

Why did Governor Wentworth select the name "LEE" for this town? He named a large number of new towns, and gave them very appropriate names, but none better than this excellent town has borne for one hundred and fifty years. There is no record of his reason for so naming it. In selecting the English town names he took those in which his friends and acquaintances lived, the residences of distinguished persons. I guess, but do not know, that he took the name Lee from the town of that name on the River Lee, now in greater London.

This Week's Lee Trivia Question: (The answer will be in next week's E-Crier.) The New Hampshire Turnpike was opened for travel, from the Piscataqua River to Concord, NH in 1802. How did this impact the development of Lee?
