BANNED BOOK WEEK

September 22–28, 2013

Banned Books Week is an annual event celebrating the freedom to read. It usually occurs during the last week of September and it highlights the value of free and open access to information. So, naturally, Lee Public Library is on board with this celebration. Banned Books Week brings together the entire book community -- librarians, booksellers, publishers, journalists, teachers, and readers of all types -- in shared support of the freedom to seek and to express ideas, even those some consider unorthodox or unpopular. According to the American Library Association some of the top most frequently challenged or banned books of 2012 are: Captain Underpants, The Kite Runner, Looking for Alaska, and the Glass Castle. Come check out our display at the library to find out why they were challenged or banned in some communities across the United States.

BITS of HISTORY from the NEWMARKET ADVERTISER
September 21, 1895

*James Currier is credited with having shot the largest game around Wadley's this season - a fish hawk measuring five feet two inches from tip to tip.

*The Fernald brothers have Edward Andrew's hay press in operation at the Glidden Farm, converting the hay, which they have stored there, into bales for the market.

*Lawyer Fall and his wife of Malden, were quite jubilant over the fact that they were the first ones to drive over the new Wadley's bridge.

*Now doth the succulent tomato adorn the window sills to get the finishing blush on.

Excerpts submitted by Road Agent Randy Stevens, who has been researching Lee's history in his spare time. Thanks Randy!
