HISTORY OF WOMAN WAR CORRESPONDENTS

Wednesday, October 4th 7:00 pm
Public Safety Complex

The Lee Historical Society and the Lee Library are presenting a program by writer and historian Linda Shenton Matchett on the history of woman war correspondents. Brave and determined women fought hard against stereotypes and rules that prevented them from covering combat. Eventually, they broke through the front line of discrimination and entered the battlefields of war. Their coverage forever changed the way war was covered. One woman, Dicky Chappelle, gave her life in Vietnam and others braved the battlefields of Europe, Asia and the Pacific. This aspect of United States history is unique and Linda will shine light on the legacy of these extraordinary women. The program is free and open to the public. Refreshments will be served.

WHAT'S HAPPENING AT LITTLE RIVER PARK? TREES! TREES! TREES!

Yesterday, 11 new trees were planted at Little River Park as part of ongoing landscape improvements. The following new trees were positioned around the pavilion area: American Elms, Pin Oaks, Red Sunset Maples, Autumn Brilliance, and Prairie Fire Crabapple.

Drip irrigation will be installed next week to make sure that the trees will have the needed water for sustained growth. A new pump house was built by our talented crew at the Highway department to house the pressure tank and the water controls. Check out those wide boards on the outside walls!

Many thanks to Mark Davis at Pawtuckaway Nursery and Randy Stevens and his highway crew.

THIS WEEK'S LEE TRIVIA QUESTION (answer will be given in next week's Lee E-Crier): On what date did South Lee originally get its own postmaster and what year was the post office in South Lee discontinued?

THE ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S TRIVIA QUESTION: In addition to an historic marker placed at the site by the Lee Heritage Commission, what else marks the approximate location where the South Lee Depot once stood?

Answer - Hydrangeas! (Actually, they stood at the north end of the depot building.)

They're on the strip of land between Demeritt Road and Route 125 and in beautiful bloom right now!

If you have suggestions for Lee Trivia Q's & A's, please email Anne Jennison: jennison.anne@gmail.com

In October, the Lee Heritage Commission will be making decisions about which photos to include in the 2018 Heritage Commission wall calendar. The September 30th deadline is looming, so if you've been thinking about submitting a photo or two for consideration, please make it a point to send your photos of Lee in THIS WEEK to: LeeNHcalendar@gmail.com so they can be considered for the Lee Heritage Commission's 2018 wall calendar.
