 A resident complained of a suspicious beeping-type noise in the area. I responded to the area and determined that the source of the noise was coming from a nearby home. The noise seemed to be related to the alarm system, but was not an activation. I checked the exterior and everything was secure. I also attempted to make contact with the residence and nobody was at home. I later called ADT Security Systems and inquired about the noise. The dispatcher from ADT advised that most likely the battery needed to be replaced on the alarm system. The dispatcher also advised that unless the home-owner is present to trouble-shoot the problem, that it cannot be corrected remotely.
