WINKLER broke-up a few months ago and some of her belongings to include (clothing, DVD's and an I-POD) are still at his house. BARTLET advised that when they arrived, C. WINKLER told them that none of BASSITT's belongings are there. I explained to BASSITT that I would contact C. WINKLER and look into the matter. Upon calling C. WINKLER, I inquired about the items BASSITT claims to still be at the residence. C. WINKLER advised that back in June her basement flooded and consequently property was damaged. C. WINKLER stated that the basement needed to be cleaned-out and she recalls discarding numerous trash bags full of misc. items. C. WINKLER explained that some of these items may have been J. WINKLER's and BASSITT's. C. WINKLER also advised that she has already given back all of BASSITT's property to her. I explained to C. WINKLER that this matter is determined to be civil and if BASSITT wants to pursue it she will be advised to file a civil claim. I then contacted BASSITT and explained that her property is believed to have been thrown-out and advised her that the matter is entirely civil and would need to file a claim.

She also refused to let MASON come over, but she would be willing to bring the property and drop it off at the police department and MASON could pick it up later. I advised her that is not acceptable because it is a civil matter and the police will not accept the property. LERMER told me then MASON will not get his property back, but she may agree if MASON can think of a third party for the exchange but she will not name one. I called MASON back and told him what his mother has said and told him about his options, including court.

Shaw advised that when she checked her gauge again, it was now at 2 gallons. Shaw advised that only two people call her LUMPS, and they were identified as Andre Ownes and Michael Ciriello.  While on patrol, I was flagged down by a motorist (CHAYKOWSKY) who reported a motor vehicle complaint. CHAYKOWSKY advised that while traveling westbound on Atlantic Ave. a dump truck that was traveling behind her was tailgating her and appeared to be operating erratically. CHAYKOWSKY provided a brief description of the dump truck (red and silver) and a direction of travel (westbound on Rte Exeter Road). I checked the area of Exeter Road and conducted a motor vehicle stop on a dump truck. After speaking to the operator, FORD, he explained that he was not on Atlantic Ave. and came from Portsmouth. Later that shift, I follow-up with CHAYKOWSKY who advised that she wanted that signed but would like the operator of the truck to be warned. CHAYKOWSKY provided me with the license plate of the dump truck (KRUEGER) and I ran it through dispatch. The plate came back not on file. CHAYKOWSKY also provided the name on the side of the dump trucks door, Peter J. Krueger and Sons. I performed a search and located a Kruger Excavating and Trucking company out of Pembroke. I called the number and was informed that nobody was at the office. A message was left.
